Mission Statement

The Latino Parent Leadership Program (LPLP) mission is to increase Latino parent involvement within the schools by promoting and strengthening Latino parent leadership skills, their understanding of the US education system, and their rights and responsibilities as parents.

Goals

To increase Latino parent involvement in:

- Advocacy: Parents participating on councils and committees (SIT and PTO), participating in the decisions and operations of the school.
- Classroom aides: Volunteering in the classroom, on field trips, and other school events.
- Communication: Collaborating and communicating with school staff.
- Home involvement: Initiating learning activities at home, reading to children, helping with homework, playing educational games, and discussing current events etc.

History

The Latino Parent Leadership Program (LPLP) has been in existence since 1993 when the program began providing educational workshops in Boulder and Lafayette.

The model features monthly meetings for monolingual Spanish-speaking parents who have not been participating in their children's schools because of language, transportation or cultural barriers.

Since 1993, several hundred Latino parents in Boulder County have benefited from these educational workshops.

Each year, parents and school staff develop the leadership training curriculum. Topics presented in past trainings have included: Understanding the US School System; Public Speaking; Valuing Diversity; Public Speaking; Assertiveness; Importance of Parent Involvement; and Community Organizing.

In 2001, the Boulder Valley School District principals requested a training which would involve parents more actively in school committees such as PTA, SIT, PAC. As a result the steering committee with input from principals designed the Advanced Leadership Training Component, which is a more in-depth leadership and parent involvement training . It was piloted successfully at the end of 2001.

Currently the LPLP model is being carried out in Boulder, Lafayette, and Longmont.
