

Superintendent's Corner – Nov. 19, 2007

Last week I had the honor of hosting Colorado Department of Education Commissioner Dwight D. Jones when he came to visit Boulder Valley School District. We went to three of our schools, where he saw firsthand some of the innovative programs which contribute to the excellence of our district.

At Creekside Elementary, Commissioner Jones was particularly impressed by the Garden to the Table initiative and the learning taking place around that. He visited the AVID classroom at Angevine and offered to return sometime to speak with those students about the importance of aiming high. While touring Broomfield High, Commissioner Jones met many outstanding students who excel in both sports and academics.

I was proud to show Commissioner Jones a few examples of BVSD's excellence and equity. Click here to read his thoughts about his visit.

Happy Thanksgiving!
Chris King, Superintendent